

Asahikawa Medical University's Fundamental Objectives (Third Medium Term)

Based on our founding principles to produce individuals to be involved in regional medicine, Asahikawa Medical University, aiming to further develop education, research, and medicine, to nurture devoted medical professionals, and to contribute to society, has the following basic objectives.

1. To nurture individuals to become medical professionals with independence and worldwide competence as well as research ability with global perspectives and high practical ability, and to provide the education to enhance deep compassion and respect for human dignity and foster fundamental and universal skills.
2. To provide active support for international-standard research and creative research and to develop a support system for the clinical and practical application of achievements of basic studies, and to prepare a suitable environment for innovative research.
3. To strengthen mutual cooperation with other universities, research institutes, administrative organs, etc. to solve problems in local communities, and make social contributions by encouraging collaborative research among industry, government and academia.
4. To promote the internationalization of education and research by producing individuals who can work in a global environment and welcome international researchers, and to transmit the information worldwide.
5. To foster medical care in the advanced acute medical settings with highly advanced medical treatment, to develop a system enabling interprofessional collaboration to offer high quality medical care, and to produce excellent doctors and nurses by promoting the reinforcement of cooperation of medical functions and advanced clinical studies.
6. To establish a stable financial underpinning by strategically checking and reviewing the redistribution of internal resources and university governance under the leadership of the president.

